To the friends of Temperance and the public generally we now make our appeal in behalf of this paper. The publisher feeling it a matter of importance to the interest of the Temperance cause in the District, as well as the general interest of the cause, and having been, as he conceives, Providentially placed in a situation at this time when he can mingle this interest with that of the business men, and thereby render a double service to the community, and still further open a medium of communication by which our principles may be extended far and wide, at a cheap rate. He has purchased a printing establishment, so as not only to be able to put a daily paper regularly to press, but also a weekly; and still further, be able to do any other printing the public may be pleased to have done; and he assures them that they shall have no cause of complaint. He has made arrangements by which he can devote his time to the interest of the office and the paper; and, having employed Mr. Charles W.
Fenton, who will be always on the spot, to conduct the printing, he has no doubt but that general satisfaction will be given. We shall make arrangements to have the earliest news; also the proceedings of Congress.

We wish all who are indebted for the paper up to this time to pay up, as the affairs of the tri-weekly must be closed. They will perceive that we are about to give them a better paper, double the number, at the same price.

While the "COLUMBIAN FOUNTAIN" will be devoted to the cause of Temperance, its columns will be enriched by original articles on subjects calculated to interest, instruct, and benefit its readers. It is intended so to blend variety, amusement, and instruction, as that the various tastes of its patrons may be (as far as it is practicable) gratified.
Commerce, Literature, and Science, and every other subject of interest, not inconsistent with Temperance and morality, will receive the earnest attention of the publishers.
Nothing of a sectarian, political, or personal character will be admitted.

A CARD.

THE subscriber begs leave to say to members of Congress and others, that he has several good rooms which he will let on accommodating terms, either furnished or unfurnished, located on the South side of Pennsylvania avenue, between 9th and 10th streets, and equidistant between the Capitol and the public offices. I have also two of the best cellars in the city, which I will rent in part or the whole, or receive goods on storage.
This is a good opportunity for butchers or market people.

THE WATERMAN'S ARMS.

A TALE OF DOVER.

BY EDWARD F. WELD.

Continued.

But without waiting for a speech, she expressed her own kind feelings, regardless of the presence of others; now drawing Alice towards her, clasping her as though she never would release her, again holding her at arms' length, and looking upon her as though doubtful of her identity—kissing, laughing, crying, talking, all in a breath, while the recipient of all these kind attentions, amid her blushes, looked far from being one who ever did or ever could smile coquettishly. 'Twas heaven's own smile she wore now; and, as for Meg, she was not now the landlady of the Water-man's Arms—her "occupation was gone," she was mere woman. Her heart was touched as she felt the girl she had reared, scolded, petted and loved, was now no longer hers. Like thousands of her sex, she seldom troubled her own heart, till from laying idle it had rusted, or acquired, as it were, an incrustation. But the work of years was dissolved in a moment, and the crust removed—there was the kernel as warm, as pure, as kind as ever.

However, she recovered; that is to say, she awoke from this heavenly trance to feel she was mortal, and that mortals were present to witness these bursts of affection.
"Why Alice! only think of it, before the men!" But Alice did not flee their presence. Her ordeal was not over, and she quietly remained by the side of her husband to receive a father's blessing or with her beneath his frown.

Who could be present at a scene like this and not feel awkward? The old man stood with his glass under his arm, with a face as stern as Nelson's quartermaster, and as speechless as a mummy, chilling all except Meg, who, with her warm heart and happy feelings, would have melted an iceberg.
There was no keeping her still, for her curiosity was aroused, and as she said, she meant to know all about it—"when, where, how, and who married them!" and in her joy, she emulated a kitten in antics, running from one to the other, and returned only to consciousness upon receiving a hearty smack from the lips of the bridegroom, tendered in exchange for a gift similar, though only a mere shade more delicate, which, the moment before, she had unconsciously bestowed on him.

"Put a stop to this foolery! I tell you the tide serves! and away with you to the boat," said the stern old man.

"But, father, one kind word first—I ask it for my wife."

"Aye!" said all present.

"Well, well—it can't be helped, so God bless you both; and now, boy, say goodbye to your wife, and be lively in getting aloft."

"No, let him stay and take my next chance—I'll take his now. I owe them both a good turn, for my ill manners awhile ago," interrupted the one whose rudeness had brought about the eclatissement.

"You have all said good-bye to your wives—a pilot's turn is his turn, married or single; and in the boat my son goes!"

CHAPTER II.

The harbor of Dover, one of the Cinqueports, owes its safety more to art than nature; and in storms, like the one we have described, is inaccessible, though once within its docks, the weather-bound mariner may rest in security. Two long piers, half a cable's length apart, stretch into the sea; these form the harbor's mouth, and to be in harbor there, is to be in dock, as stout walls, with massive gates, are built from pier to pier, forming basins, much like those we see in the construction of our own canals. Upon the end of one of these piers stood a frame light-house, containing an illuminated clock, which, in addition to telling the hour, told the time of high water.
At the period these piers were constructed, there was a clean bottom and deep water at their outer extremities, but now, from the repeated force of storms, there was accumulated a sand bank, which rendered access, except in smooth weather and high water, a matter attended with danger and difficulty—though not a whit less so would be the attempt at egress.

At this time the sea literally broke over the pier heads, and from pier to pier, and as far as the eye could penetrate in the gloom, rolled one confused mass of breakers. Huge overgrown seas came rolling in, heaving their snowy crests aloft, as if conscious of their might, while their approach was heralded by a deafening roar.
As they dashed against the pier head the light house would become veiled from view for the moment, while in the next its sickly glare fell on a sea of whitened foam.

But here at the boat's crew we were so lately with at the Waterman's Arms. The transition from day to night has been but apparently the work of a moment, and the men lighting their way by lanterns as they bear their boat are those employed by the Humane Society. She seems but a tiny shell to gain an offing through the breakers we have described, and to live in the sea beyond; so light as to be carried with ease.

Upon their reaching the outer sea wall she was launched, and, though a good pull from the pier head, and in comparatively smooth water, her motion here, if never to be augmented, might deter one from attempting what is to be their task when they reach the end of the pier. One by one her crew embark, each has his oar, and as he takes his place secures himself by a stout strap to his seat. A glance tells the steersman that all is ready, and as his eye turns from his crew seaward, he gives the word of command, and with a steady stroke they "give her way."

With firm though rapid stride the master walks toward the pier head, speaking trumpet in hand, which ever and anon he raises to his mouth to issue words of command, commendation and encouragement.
Steadily onward moves the boat, though slowly, for light as she is, arduous is the task of the rowers, to impel her against the sea, which now threatens to engulf her.
Word from shore has now become inaudible.
She hears the light, and bravely she stems the wave. With breathless anxiety the group now regard her. All seems lost!
No! Nobly done! She rides head to it.
"Well behaved!" was the cry from the spectators. From impulse they cheered—and as the sea broke its spray, hiding the light, they wondered at their own audacity.

The light shone again and there the boat was like a speck amid the waste of waters, her gallant crew acting up to the most sanguine hopes of the friends on shore. No shout is heard—fear benumbs the anxious spectators, and with feelings of silent horror they await the moment that she meets the next threatening wave, which if she safely rides, it would seem to be through Heaven's own agency.

One man's eye alone saw her safe over it; fear had closed all others—it was that of the master's—and his stern voice was heard by those about him above the tempest as he gave cheering though useless mandates.
Again she was visible, now more distant.
The master felt he was a father—but the next moment bade fair to leave him childless.

To be continued.

Leather, Leather, Leather.

THE subscriber, Thos. G. Ford, returns his thanks to his friends and the consumers of Leather in general, for the liberal patronage he has received since he opened his Leather and Cur-rying store, on the corner of 7th and G streets.— He would respectfully inform them that he has now a full assortment of his own finish on hand, and which he can recommend as equal to any in the District, which will be sold on the most reasonable terms.

The stock consists of Sole Leather and Skirting, and very superior Calf Skins, upper and kippis, Harness and Bridle, and bags' Leather, &c. All his Leather being tanned expressly for the establishment, he feels confident, with his practical knowledge of the business in all its branches, he can give general satisfaction.

WM. ALBAUGH, A. M., Tutor and Teacher in Preparatory Department.
H. R. GEIGER, Teacher of Writing.

The course of studies in Pennsylvania College is as extensive and substantial as that of any institution in the country. The Preparatory Department provides for instruction in all the branches of a thorough English, business education, in addition to the Elements of the Mathematics and Classical Literature. The College course is arranged in the four classes usual in the institutions of this country.

The government of the students is as energetic as their circumstances seem to require. They attend at least two recitations a day, and the Faculty contemplate increasing them to three, Church and Bible Class on the Sabbath, and are visited in their rooms so frequently as to preclude the danger of any great irregularities. It is believed no institution in the United States has more exemplary young men in connexion with it. They are all required to lodge in the College edifice, special cases excepted.

The annual expenses are—for board, tuition and room rent, during the winter session $61 87 1-2; for the summer session, $41 87 1-2; washing, $10; wood, $3 00. Total expense, $116 75. Boarding can be had in town at $1 25 per week.

There are two vacations in the year, commencing on the third Thursdays of April and September; each of five weeks continuance.

The summer session will commence on Thursday, the 22d of May. The annual commencement takes place on the third Thursday in September.

The Trustees have recently made various arrangements which will increase the efficiency of the Institution. They have increased the number of Professors and provided for the most ample instruction of the students.

Professor Baugher and Haupt are prepared to board boys and to exercise a special supervision over their studies and deportment, and Parents who may prefer placing their sons under their care, will be secure in regard to their proper management, under arrangements such as pertain to the family circle.

resources of the country and the world, and illustrate the various topics bearing upon Commerce and Commercial Literature.

It has been, and will continue to be, the aim of the Editor and Proprietor of the Merchants' Magazine, to avoid everything of a party, political, or sectional bias or bearing, in the conduct of the work—opening its pages to the free and fair discussion of antagonistic doctrines connected with the great interests of Commerce, Agriculture, Manufactures and the Currency.

Complete sets of the Merchants' Magazine, embracing 12 semi-annual volumes, of about 600 large octavo pages each, bringing it down to June, 1844, inclusive, may be obtained at the Publisher's Office, 142 Fulton street, New York, at the sub-
